AN HISTORIC SCENE.

A Thrilling Reproduction of the Atro, cious Mountain Meadow Massacre. A Thrilling Reproduction of the Atrocious Mountain Meadow Massacro.

The great Forepaugh and Wild West combined shows, which exhibit in this city May 8 and 9, brings the unwritten history of the far West to the doors of civilization.
There is nothing more tragic in history than the Mountain Meadow massacre, and this is illustrated by Dr. Carver, known as "Evil Spirit of the Plains," and scores of scouts, cowboys and Indians, in a way that vividily pictures the awful horrors of the scene.
The Mountain Meadow massacre occurred in 1857, and the victims were a band of emigrants on their way across the plains.
They were ambushed by a party of Indians and Mormous, under the command of John D. Lee, the chief of Brigham Young's infamous "Destroying Angels," and though they fought desperately, were outnumbered, and under promise of protection surrendered. Lee was false to his promise and the entire company, Including 130 men, women and children, were massacred in cold blood. The mammoth quarter-mile hippodrome track gives abundant room for the reproduction of this thrilling border drams, which is given with all the accessories necessary to make the performance lifelike and complete. "Adam Forepaugh, jr.'s $50,000 troupe of trained bronchos, Blondin, the equine aerialist; the trapeze horse, Eclipse, and a triple arenic exhibition, are among the other features of this unapproachable big dual show.

McFarland and Galt; solo, Mr. A. H. Galt; solo, Miss Mollie Byrne; selection, Schubert Quartette. Features of the entertainment were the selected recitations of Mr. John Tweedale, the whistling solo of Mrs. H. W. Wells and the harmonics performed by Mr. W. A. Haley and Master John E. Haley on the zither, sleighbolls and musical glasses. The programme throughout was exceptionally well rendered, every number eliciting a round of applause from a cultured audience. The Homeopathic Dispensary is one of Washington's most worthy charities, and fully deserved the efforts made in its behalf.
